About Cybermissions

Overview of The Ministry | 2015 Annual Report

Corporation

Cybermissions was first incorporated in the Philippines in 2001 as the Asian Internet Bible Institute, then in the USA (in California, as a religious non-profit) in 2004, as the Asian Internet Bible Institute – International and was later renamed Cybermissions. We received our 501c3 letter in 2006 and have operated with a CEO and a five-member volunteer board, none of whom are related to each other. The board meets approximately quarterly.

Mission Statement

The mission of Cybermissions is to provide life-changing and strategic Christian content, primarily as freely transmissible digital resources, for God's workers in the developing world and also to equip key leaders in the area of digital ministry.

CEO: Rev. John Edmiston

Rev. John Edmiston B.Sc. B.D. is the CEO of Cybermissions. As an expert in technology in missions John Edmiston's projects are as diverse as: bible teaching websites, evangelistic Internet cafes, covert radio broadcasting, resource distribution through mobile devices, cybersecurity, Internet radio stations and formal online learning. He is an Australian who has lived and ministered in Papua New Guinea, the Philippines and South-East Asia. He now lives in Los Angeles with his wife Minda.
